With the help of your VPN, you can access your CAD/RMS data from any location utilizing phones, tablets, laptops, or desktop computers with the new Mobile Dashboard, a robust browser-based tool. Upload images, examine earlier OI reports, update CAD, and more. Adding it to your Mobile Data System (MDS) is ideal.

When agencies deploy MDS in their cars, they see an instant return on their investment. Increased convenience and efficiency for both officers and supervisors make up a portion of the return. The immediate improvement in public safety and officer safety, however, is more crucial. Digital cameras and bar-code scanners are added to MDS software as extra features for an agency's mobile units. Using a wireless network, agencies can upload the ticket data straight into their backend records database after scanning the driver's license information and printing citations automatically in the vehicle. Imagine that generating citations and entering data into the records system did not require anyone to write anything down!

What about eForms? Data entry for incident, accident, and arrest reports is completed by the field officer just once, at the point of origin. A supervisor receives reports for final assessment via a secure mobile data network. The records section receives approved reports via the network and adds them to the backend database. Duplicate data entry by other staff members is removed.

The way law enforcement organizations handle incident reporting is once again being transformed by USA Software's field reporting software. Yes, you may still upload reports from the vehicle, retrieve information in real time, and record data at the place of origin. Only now, with XML-based technology and time-saving eForms, is it possible to accomplish so remotely.
