The cheapest day to fly to Hawaii is generally Tuesday or Wednesday. Flights departing midweek are often less expensive due to lower demand. To save the most, avoid weekends, holidays, and school break periods. Booking your flight 6–8 weeks in advance also helps secure better pricing, particularly if you're flying from the mainland U.S. Consider flying into alternative Hawaiian airports like Kona (KOA) or Hilo (ITO) instead of Honolulu (HNL) for potential savings. You'll also find that flying during Hawaii's shoulder seasons—April to early June and September to mid-November—provides cheaper airfare and fewer crowds. Flexibility is your best tool when planning an affordable Hawaiian vacation.
